“ 9 years ago from when Mom went to the hospital - Mom come to stay with me for a week. I was scheduled to be induced to have Zane. Mom knew how stressed and nervous I was about going in for a planned delivery. So instead of us just sitting around and me worrying about what was in the near future, we went and got everything so she could teach me how to make her sugar cookies (my favorite). Looking back now it seems as though it took all day to make those cookies. Although I know it shouldn't have. That was just mom's way of keeping me preoccupied so I wouldn't have time to worry. Everytime I have made her cookies since then I have always taken her one just to make sure they tasted exactly the way she used to make them.

“ the thing I remember the most is when we lived next door in Erie and she would always put bottles of RC Cola in the freezer until they just got slushy and then we drank them, always tasted so good. And would talk for hours, I lived over there at her trailer more than I did at home. She was a good momma to me too. Rest in peace my precious Angel.

“ I know of multiple things my grandmother loved; cats, peacocks, Gone With The Wind, cooking for her family. But what she really loved was Mexican food. Anytime we can to visit, we could always expect to visit one of her favorite Mexican restaurants, El Chico's. I don't remember the food, but sitting at that big round table and visiting with family is what really stands out in my memory.

We used to go to Humboldt as well for Mexican. One thing I have noticed since going thru pics, when she was young, really young that she seemed to have darker skin. We always gave credit to Paul for Paula being olive skinned. Of course they played outside all the time, but show that she took the sun well. I kind of got her hooked on GH soap and she used to have to fill me in, then we got dvr, but we still talked bout it. I don't really feel like watching it much. So so so much I will miss! Love you Mom<3
