“ This is a borrowed poem I read, but it fits so well, I wanted to share...

*Memories of my Mom and I, live in my heart so clearly,
She means the world and all to me, I love her dearly.
And when I travel back in time, I see her sitting there,
Her open arms, her smiling face, framed by her dark brown hair.
My tiny self climbs up and snuggles her so tight,
I love her squishy softness, I love her eyes so bright.
But most of all her hands I see, much bigger they were than mine, with interesting marks and spots and veins that roam and vine and twine.*

*Oh the work and strife and toil that pair of hands went through, the joy, the bliss, the love they'd known, hands so strong and true.
My little hands, so different, but as the years have flown,
I see my Mommy's hands again, when I look down upon my own.*

I love and miss you Mommy...xoxo Shirley

“ I find it comforting to know she will finally have the sharpest memory and quickest witt again. I can't remember her ever raising her voice to us grandkids or a conversation without her sweet giggle. May the little 'ol sweet Grammy that showed us belly laughs and the love for Tab rest in peace. -Love You Grammy

“ I remember visiting grandma and grandpa when they still lived in Marrayville WA. I couldn't have been but 5 or 6 yrs old at the time. I was out in the front yard with my aunt Skeet while she was working on her car and I had found a piece of gum "still in the wrapper" on the ground, so I unwrapped it and put it in my mouth. Well evidently at my age I wasn't suppose to have gum and when I went into the house chewing it Gramma busted me and asked where I had gotten the gum and I lied and said aunty Skeet gave it to me, of course gramma immediately went and asked her if she had given me gum and of course she had no idea where it came from. I got the lecture of how it could of been poisoned by some crazy person and to never eat anything that you pick up off the ground. Gramma was always worrying over us about somthin. Im gonna miss that the most about her I think. That and the cuckoo clock that they had when we were little.

She had such a great sense of humor and loved to laugh and I suppose I she spent a lot of time laughing at me and the silly things I would do to make her laugh. One time I danced her into the wall at the Cedar Stump Tavern and I though she was going to hurt herself laughing at both me and herself. Another time I had her almost crying when I pulled a fried egg out of my shirt pocket when Sally and I stopped by to see her and Gene when they lived in Marysville, Washington. It is comforting to know that she is finally at peace and with Gene.
